Hi Rich, Just wondering after looking at your pics of Costa Maya from your Grand Princess cruise, any details, looks pretty nice. Can you just hop on a cab and whats the name of it, how far?? Thanks, going to be stopping there in Feb and so far have no idea of what to do, but would love to go to a nice beach. Donna Tuesday Chat Host

It was very pretty, unfortunately there was not much there. There are chairs on the beach along chairs both sides of the pier. Only really one spot to get into the ocean, most of the beach was pretty rough and rocky. A shopping mall right at the end of the pier has about a dozen shops including a couple of real estate offices for this new cruise ship port. In the center of the mall there is a saltwater swimming pool with deck chairs and an outdoor amphitheater with Folkloric shows, all free for the cruise ship passengers. Even a guy doing the spray paint art in the center, he was quite good. You can catch a cab to Majahual, about 10 minutes away. We did not make the trip but from what I heard, I don't think there was much more there than in Costa Maya! In summary, not much there, very pretty place but in a few years after some development I can see a very nice cruise port. Others may say that it's a nice port now... but won't be in a few years after development kicks in. The reefs were still in decent shape. I even saw a small morey eel there.
